POWERS OF STAKEHOLDER

Action Is Threatened by Attorney for Boxers to Compel Staging of Bout.

The developments of yesterday in th Dempsey-Carpentier championship figh Dempsey-Carpentier championship light indicate that the match is not off, and that it may have to be staged by the original triumvirate that arranged for the bout. The failure of Carpentier to post his forfeit in this country and the uncertainty as to the whereabouts of the Dempsey bond are declared by legal experts not to be a violation of contract, and that they do not constitute a basis for the cancellation of the obligations of any of the promoters.

Of the permeters.

Of the outstanding features of yesterday, the most important was a conference between Tex Rickard, who is willing to stags the fight without help from any one, and William A. Brady, who has withdrawn. Rickard made a proposition to take over Brady's one-third interest in the undertaking, but the latter declared he would have to communicate with C. B. Cochran, who is in London, before giving a definite answer. Rickard called attention to the fact that Brady did not consult with Cochran before calling off the match, as the London promoter was unaware of the action till the cable informed him.

Second in importance was the announcement by the attorney for the fighters that if the trio of promoters refused to stage the match according to agreement they would be taken into court.

Stakeholder's Status.

Another interesting angle of the controversy was the declaration that under the terms of the contract Robert Edgren, who was appointed stakeholder, is also authorized to decide all disputes and the partles to the agreement are irrevocably bound by his ruilings.

After the conference between Rickard and and provided the former and called the conference between Rickard and provided and provided the conference between Rickard and Robert the conference between Rickard and Robert Rickar of the promoters. the outstanding features of yester authorized to decide all disputes and the parties to the agreement are irrevocably bound by his rulings.

After the conference between Rickard and Brady the former announced that he had offered to take over Brady's, interest and bond in the proposed bout. Rickard said that Brady refused to accept the offer until he had consulted with Charles Cochran, the third joint promoter in the project, who is at present in London.

Brady agreed, however, to communiwith Cochran by cable and ascer-whether the latter desired to conochran desired to abandon his share in match the match.

According to Rickard, Kearns and others a bond for $50,000 was made out by the champion and his manager, but it cannot be found. Officials of the Central Union Trust Company of this city stated that the bond was not in their possession, as called for by the contract entered into on November 5, 1800.

Kearns telegraphed to a local representative here to break into his personal safe deposit box in order to ascertain if the hond had been placed there by mistake, but the result of this search is unknown. The bonds of the three promoters and the money put up in France by Carpentier have been accounted for apparently, and only Dempsey's forfeit is missing.

The clause rearding Edgren's powers

The clause r arding Edgren's powers follow: "The parties hereto agree that Robert Edgren shall be the sole and final arbiter of all questions relating to any of the covenants and conditions of this agreement, and agree to be irreconducted. vocably bound by the decision of the said Robert Edgren."

Attorneys for the puglists expressed the opinion that under this clause each and every one of the promoters would be obliged to discharge their obligations cassumed in the contract, even though certain clauses had been technically violent of the promoters would be obliged to assume the contract, even though certain clauses had been technically violented, should the arbiter rule that they ing out the match. Such a move would compel Rickard to post the full $100,000 forfeit of the promoters and assume responsibility for a $500,000 purse.

Rickard added that there existed a verbal agreement between the three promoters to the effect that if one wished to withdraw from the agreement he would turn over his rights to the remaining promoters ready to continue with the contract.

Rickard declared that he intended to assert his rights under this private agreement, and that if Brady or Cochran were not ready to continue he agreement, and that if Brady or Cochran were not ready to continue he would stage the bout himself, with, perhaps, a few changes in the terms of the contract. He added that he believed the others were at least morally bound to go through with the bout.

Rickard displayed interest in a statement made by F. J. Fuller, vice-president of the Central Union Trust Company, regarding deposits of the forfeit money.

Fuller's statement was to the effect that neither Dempsey nor Carpentier had put up their money with the depository here. Rickard said he was certain Dempsey had made out a bond, because at one time he had seen it lying on his desk. In addition, Rickard said, that the three promoters had agreed to grant Dempsey any additional time he might need in case he did not have ready men-y at the time set for posting, but that Dempsey had never made request for such leeway.

Rickard expressed faith in Dempsey's good intent, and also in that of Carpentier, and said Carpentier was not to biame if the French Government refused to allow the money to be withdrawn

By KERR N. PETRIE.

One more indication of how the game of golf is growing in the Philadelphia district was given the other night at Stratford of the Golf Association of Philadelphia, when that organization voted to run its tournament hereafter on a little more ambitious lines. Instead of sixteen qualifying, thirty-two hereafter will become eligible for the stead of sixteen qualifying, thirty-two hereafter will become eligible for the match play, and there will be a thirty-six hole final instead of the eighteen hole joust which now obtains.

Philadelphia not so many years ago was the weak sister of the golf sections of the United States, but now it has a fine school of players and these are making a name both for themselves and their home town. Its champion-ships are becoming well worth the winning. Whitemarah Valley this time gets the amateur title event, while it will interest the professionals to hear that there is a likelihood of the open going to Pine Valley, one of the best courses in the United States. Frank McNamara of Cherry Valley is the holder of the Philadelphia open honors.

HUTCHISON MAY BE HIGH LIGHTS AND SHADOWS IN ALL SPHERES OF SPORT

By DANIEL.
Copyright, 1921, by The New York Herald.

N signing Tad Jones to a five year contract as football coach, with carte blanche and powers untrammelled, Yale has made a splendid move and a giant stride toward its rehabilitation on the gridiron. We do not say that Jones's work last season was without flaws—a few of them perhaps serious. But he did not deserve the unfavorable criticism which was heaped upon him the day after the Harvard victory over Yale last November. This criticism, strangely, was stronger right in New Haven, where followers of the game had had an opportunity to learn of his handleaps, than it was in New York.

Jones gained valuable experience in 1920 and drew for himself a map of football coaching pitfalls which should stand him in good stead next fall. The former quarterback had been away from football for a number of years, and that fact, without question, hampered him in the development of his attack. His defence was the best his material could build. Jones's big handicap came in the form of injuries which prevented his forming a regular team which could stend through the weeks of heatile. Jones also were regular team which could stand through the weeks of battle. Jones also was hampered early in the season by a lack of knowledge of the personal characteristics of his material. This handicap will be obviated this year by his labing of the personal characteristics of his material. This handicap will be obviated this year by his taking charge of the spring practice.

Period of Boxing Inflation Definitely Fauces.

The latest developments in the Dempsey-Carpentier match threaten to steer us into a fog of legal terms, threats of lawsuits and everything else except a boxing bout. William A. Brady and Charles Cochran apparently head legal legal through which they could escape from the embarrassing the burden. Cochran announces that he is ready to stage the fight in London—but not under the present articles. If Dempsey wants to meet Carpentier abroad he will have to reduce his fee. So will the Frenchman if he wants a chance at the title. And if the boxers want to engage in their fisticulfs in this country they will have to make similar reductions.

Public sentiment is altogether with Brady and Cochran. Their action has announced to the world that the period of inflation of purses in boxing has come to an end. The New York State Boxing Commission delivered the first blow when it placed a limit of $15 on championship bouts. The National Boxing Association, recently organized, sent in the second blow when it followed the example of the New York Commission. The United States will take the bout on a reasonable basis—and even then the boxers, without question, would be overpaid. Dempsey and Carpentier dawdled and failed to make their hay while the sun shone. And nobody around here is going to shed any tears thereover.
